

Time for a Dip into the Rhône?

- Rhône Valley wines have lagged the fine wine market for five years, but in last six months they have outperformed. Collectors' interest in the Rhône Valley has grown recently for three reasons:
 1. Three strong Rhône vintages in a row (2015, 2016 and 2017);
 2. Jeb Dunnuck is now a vocal and credible independent 'champion' of Rhône wines.
 3. Despite recent price rises, Rhône Valley wines are still significantly cheaper than similarly scored wines in other regions.
- We screened 484 Rhône wines and came up with a Top 15 wines for 3 to 5-year price appreciation. Our selections are all:
 - 98 to 100 points by Wine Advocate;
 - Long remaining Drinking Window; and
 - Cheapest price for their score.

Rhône Valley has lagged the fine wine market ...

source: Liv-ex.com (Rhône sub-index versus fine wine index)

... but last six months have seen a buying wave

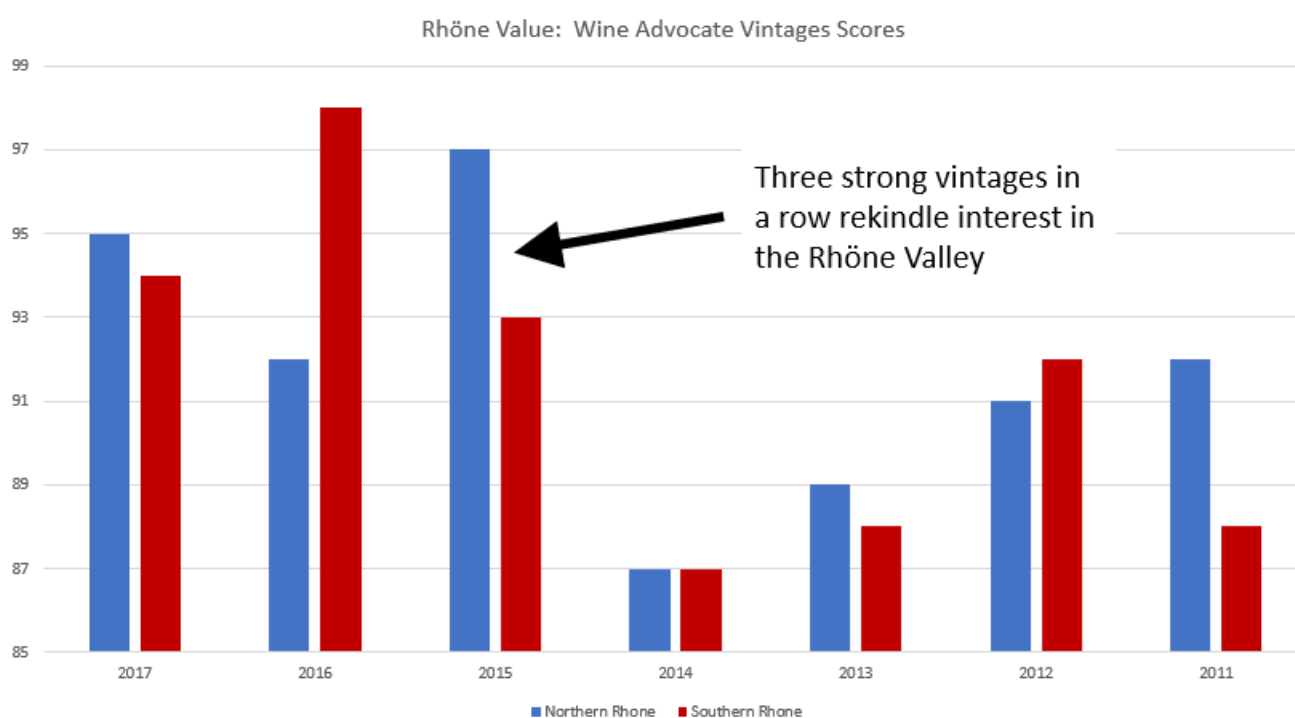

source: Liv-ex.com

Why is Money Flowing into the Rhône Today?

1. Three excellent vintages in a row (2015, 2016 and 2017) have created a background 'buzz' around Rhône Valley wines today.
2. Leading critic Jeb Dunnuck (formerly Robert Parkers' Rhône critic, now operating independently) is acting a global ambassador for the quality and profile of these wines.
3. Significant relative undervaluation of Rhône wines on a points per price basis. Compared with Bordeaux and Burgundy, Rhône wines are much cheaper for the same critic score.

1. Three Strong Vintages in a Row

After the great vintage of 2010, both the North and South Rhône had more challenging conditions until 2015. In 2015, the terroir gods returned and Côte-Rôtie / Hermitage, in particular, excelled. In 2016 it was the turn of Châteauneuf-du-Pape to shine, and then in 2017 the whole of the Rhône Valley produced consistently excellent wines.

2. Jeb Dunnuck is a Champion of the Rhône

Rhône critic Jeb Dunnuck worked for Robert Parker's Wine Advocate for many years (establishing a reputation as a world expert on Rhône wines). He left in 2017 and is now building an international reputation as an independent champion of Rhône wines. Rather like Allen Meadows at Burghound, we believe that Mr Dunnuck can and will make a major contribution to promoting the Rhône amongst collectors and investors around the world.

(In the analysis in this note we continue to use Wine Advocate scores because these were mainly written by Mr Dunnuck before he left).

3. Rhône Valley Wines are Cheap

Rhône wines are, for the same Wine Advocate score, far cheaper than more established investment regions like Bordeaux:

	Average Price per 75cl Bottle (Wine Advocate)
	95 points	96 points	97 points	98 points	99 points	100 points
Rhône Valley	£ 75	£ 106	£ 117	£ 172	£ 193	£ 279
Bordeaux	£ 321	£ 324	£ 275	£ 440	£ 699	£ 914
Rhône Valley Discount	-76.7%	-67.4%	-57.3%	-60.8%	-72.3%	-69.5%

Source: Based on Cru offer prices and Wine Advocate scores

The Rhône Valley discount is fairly consistent across 95-100 point wines. This suggests that collectors will continue to bid up prices of Rhône wines for some time. The average Rhône 100-point wine could rise 100% in price and still be at a 40% discount to the same scoring category in Bordeaux.

The Rhône Valley is more similar in production terms to Burgundy, in having tightly defined appellations which are small in size.

Although our recommendations appear very undervalued, a number of Rhône wines have already shown the potential to achieve elevated prices. Guigal La Mouline 2005 (100 points WA) is currently at £5,040 (12x75cl) and Pegau Cuvee du Capo 2007 (100 points WA) costs £4,360 (6x150cl) in the secondary market today. Our 100-point recommendations are offered at far lower prices.

Our Recommendations

We screened 484 top Rhône wines and came up with a Top 15 which we believe offer the best potential for 3 to 5-year price appreciation. Our selections are all have:

- 98 to 100 points by Wine Advocate;
- Long remaining Drinking Window; and
- Cheapest price for their score.
